

FRIENDS OF CRADLE VALLEY BULLETIN 24/6/09

I've enjoyed reading Louise Crossley's May 2009 review of the Tasmanian Parks & Wildlife Service so much that I'm forwarding an email version of it to you.

Although it's noticeably Hobart-centric, it provides us with a wonderfully cogent, insightful and independent analysis of our PWS's history, from it's "glory days" from 1979-1986 under founding director Peter Murrell to its subsequent decline.

Anyone wanting to widen their understanding of some of the current problems facing the PWS and its management of natural and cultural conservation at Cradle Valley will be well advised to read this report.

Best wishes,
John Wilson
Hon.Sec.
